

ALDRICH CLASHES WITH IOWA SENATOR

Dolliver Goads Rhode Islander Into Making Bitter Remarks.

PROMPT PROTEST FIRST OVERLOOKED

Comes During Discussion of Cotton Schedules—Insinuations Made and Resented.

Senator Dolliver's way of saying exceedingly nasty and biting things in an exceedingly polite and parliamentary way, goaded Senator Aldrich today into indulging in some observations which were amply nasty, but not so parliamentary as the delicate shafts of the Iowa.

The Rhode Islander, replying to some remarks of Dolliver about the cotton schedules, demanded to know: "Shall we yield to the importunities of these gentlemen who are reading here the briefs of the people whose desire is simply to destroy this law?" Mr. Dolliver was on his feet in an instant.

"I protest, Mr. President," he said, "against any more of that line of remarks from the honorable Senator." "And I repeat," persisted Aldrich, "that the effect of the decisions on this cotton schedule has been to allow the British manufacturers whose brief is being read in the Senate, to get into the market at ridiculously low rates. This question might as well be threshed out here as anywhere. The effect of giving this advantage to the foreign manufacturers has been an increase from $2,000,000 to $8,000,000 per annum in our imports of these goods. The question is not of the duty, but of making it enforceable."

Protests Again. "Now, Mr. President," interjected Dolliver, "who was white with rage, but very calm in demeanor, 'I cannot submit to continuance of this sort of thing without protest, and if need be, without appeal to the rules of the Senate. I protest, and with that protest I appeal to the Senate, against repetition of this insinuation that I represent anybody except the people of the United States.'"

"The Senator says that an outrageous decision took away the protection from certain lines of cloths. I say, if it has been nullified, that has been accomplished, not by importers of foreign manufactures, but by the decision of Marion Davies, chairman of the board of general appraisers of New York, on whom, under the guidance of the Senator from Rhode Island, has now devolved the task of mutilating the Dingley law."

Senator Dolliver insisted that by the process of striking out certain valorem duties and substituting graduated specific duties, the Finance Committee had greatly increased the duties on the whole range of these cotton goods which had absolutely no effect on the former prohibitive duties. "And I will prove that statement," said Mr. Dolliver, "by reference to this book of estimates of revenue, which formed the basis of the great speech in which the Senator from Rhode Island demonstrated down to 50 cents what revenues this tariff bill would produce."

La Follette Interrupts. Senator La Follette interrupted to say that the increases, which he had carefully worked out, were from 12 to 300 and 400 per cent.

Senator Aldrich, moved by the heat of Senator Dolliver's remarks, rose to apologize, and said he would withdraw any remarks which might have seemed a reflection on the motives of the Senator from Iowa. He didn't intend to reflect on anybody.

"Oh," replied Senator Dolliver, "I quite believe that. The Senator doubtless has spoken without thinking, from a habit of mind which has wanted him to make the ready answer, whenever a criticism of his schedules is offered, that it must be inspired by some unworthy motive."

Such an exceedingly animated exchange, and a good deal more of the same kind, the Senate entered upon the consideration of the textile schedules of the tariff bill today. It was plain from the start that the contest would be largely a personal one between Dolliver and Aldrich, each having set his foot on getting, in the form of the Senate's support, a vindication of the course he has taken.

Senator Dolliver charges that the Finance Committee has inserted into the cotton and woolen schedules jokers which have the effect of greatly increasing the duties.

First blood in the encounter was due to the Senator from North Dakota, when Senator Aldrich made an important concession in the rates on cotton threads and yards. The committee had provided a minimum ad valorem on these of 20 per cent. The Senator withdrew this and changed it to 15 per cent.

PROPOSE NEW MAN FOR PERSON'S JOB

Robert S. Person, auditor for the Interior Department, has lost the support of the Senators of North Dakota, and these gentlemen are now engaged in an attempt to have Mr. Person separated from the Government payroll.

Sensors Gamble and Crawford called at the White House today and recommended for Mr. Person's place a man named Howard from Highmore, N. D.

The President has not yet taken any action in the matter.

NOT IN TROUBLE FAR AS KNOWN

Has Not Been Seen Since Leaving Alexandria Home. Police on Search.

Brooding over the suicide of his friend, Thomas H. Netherland, a former clerk at the White House, who blew out his brains several weeks ago, Frederick Mills strangely disappeared after leaving his home in Alexandria to come to work in Washington a week ago yesterday. His friends now fear he may have taken his life.

Mills had been a protege of Netherland since early boyhood, and when he learned that his friend, a nervous wreck from overwork, had killed himself at his home in Belmont street, the shock so affected him that it is believed he became temporarily deranged. In no financial difficulty, and with good business prospects, his relatives and friends know of no other reason why he would leave home. All hospitals and other retreats have been canvassed, and today the police sent out a general alarm.

Mills is about twenty-eight years old, and lived at 313 Prince street, Alexandria. He was employed as head machinist at one of the large garages in Washington, and is well known here.

A week ago last Sunday evening he called at the home of a young woman. It is known that he came to Washington at the usual time the following morning, but he did not go to work. Ever since Netherland killed himself he had seemed to be deeply affected. To one of his friends he remarked that he thought he would drown himself.

"You couldn't drown yourself," the friend told him. "You're too good a swimmer for that."

Mills had several hundred dollars in a bank in Alexandria, and he did not draw out any money before he went away. "If Mills had been a drinking man or was in any trouble it might be possible to explain his disappearance," said the friend to whom he had talked about drowning himself, "but he was a man of exemplary habits and I know positively that he was not in any difficulty. He seemed to brood all the time after Netherland's suicide. He was a member of Mr. Netherland's Sunday school class, and his friend's rash act apparently affected his mind."

When last seen Mills wore a dark suit of clothes. He is described as five feet eleven inches tall, and weighs about 170 pounds. He is of slender build, has light hair and complexion, and blue eyes.

HOUSE ADJOURNS TO SEE BASEBALL

Scout Suggestion to Consider Porto Rican Bill Before Game.

Baseball fans in the House, led by Sen. E. Payne, won a victory today by forcing an early adjournment of the House in order that they might not lose a single inning of the double-header at the baseball grounds this afternoon.

The House met at 12 o'clock, and Speaker Cannon had hardly settled comfortably into his chair when Mr. Payne moved that the House adjourn. Mr. Almstedt of Pennsylvania, author of the Porto Rican bill, which has been pending for two weeks, facetiously informed Mr. Payne that in Pennsylvania factories, with which he was acquainted, notices were posted during the baseball season informing employees that the sudden death of grandmothers, uncles, etc., should be announced two hours in advance of the time the employee desired to quit work.

Mr. Olmsted suggested that the House should have an opportunity of getting in a couple of hours' debate on his bill before the umpire cried "Play Ball" at the National Park; but Mr. Payne declined to withdraw his motion, and when the vote was taken was supported by a "goodly majority" of the House.

Mr. Macon of Arkansas, the "John Wesley Gainer" of the Sixty-first Congress, demanded an yeas and nays vote.

"All gentlemen in favor of ordering the yeas and nays shall rise and stand until counted," said the Speaker.

Mr. Macon rose, but not another member of the House followed his lead, and he was greeted with roars of laughter.

"One gentleman has arisen," said the Speaker, "not a sufficient number. The yeas and nays are refused, and the House stands adjourned until next Thursday at 12 o'clock."

Practically every member of the House hurried through luncheon, at the Capitol and went out to the baseball grounds early.
